For this assignment, I worked alone. I was able to successfully implement all the features, as written on Quercus, however, there were some modifications. These modifications relate to some of the features I struggled with. For some of the features instead of having some button which would dynamilly change data on the pages, I had to create a another link just to use this button and make those modifications to the data. Another struggle was with using JavaScript, I wasted a lot of time trying to use JS with some of the features, which in the end just resulted in me not using them at all. However, I was able to utilize JQuery, which was extremely helpful.
